feat(report): client-friendly progress report styling (navy/amber)

Makes the auto-generated PR report client-friendly. Previously it read like a developer changelog (commit SHAs, per-file diffs, check tables). It now reads like a progress report a boss can skim — a branded hero, a plain-language summary, at-a-glance figures, and a "What's included" checklist.

What's included

- ✓ Branded hero heading area (DIEYNEM mark, "Project Progress Report", a "Completed" badge)
- ✓ "What's included" checklist pulled from the PR description's Changes section
- ✓ Restyled to the system's navy/amber colour scheme (build scope §5)
- ✓ Executive summary box pulled from the PR description's Summary section
- ✓ Removed git internals (SHAs, per-file diff tables, branch jargon)
- ✓ Four at-a-glance stat cards (Update #, files updated, commits, quality checks)
